FELLOW WORKERS

On November 11, 1887, Spies, Engel, Fischer and Parson, the John Browns of Industrial Emancipation, were murdered in cold blood by the iron hand of political justice. We are not complaining—we simply state the fact. It was an attempt to strangle free speech. The attempt failed. These men died to make the attempt a failure. The anarchists of San Francisco invite you to attend a meeting to be held at Equality Hall on Wednesday Evening, November 11th, 8 P. M.

History records nothing that equals this dastardly crime even in the black annals of the brutal career of governments. Unexampled and unique is the steadfast courage, simple honesty, stalwart dignity and heroic poise of these men of toil and learning, while their matchless loyalty to labor, outraged and betrayed, constitutes a solitary achievement in the annals of solidarity. Albert Parson's voluntary embrace of the governmental harlot of the State of Illinois, at that time being prostituted to the very dregs of insolent debauchery by Grinnel, Gary, Denker, Grimer, Adams, Sanford and their fellow procurers—knowing full well that his life may pay the forfeit—is so colossal an achievement that it constitutes one of those landmarks in ethical criterion and advance in emotional purity that determines the notch in progress that subsequent ages must work up to before it can be surpassed.

Nor are the beautiful characters of these victims of a vicious and shameless tyranny the main reason for lovingly commemorating their tragic demise—the issues they have raised to the dignity of a political program and the service they rendered by the example in solidarity that they set us are the mountain peaks that we must climb by doing what little there may be in us in the service of that freedom on the altar of which they have laid down their lives. Let us take up their work, the work for which they died so heroically, and carry the war into the enemy's country for free speech, free press and free assembly, all of which are necessary factors in that educational work which alone can bring about a revolution for the purpose of solving the social problem.

Come what may, the work of emancipation and education continues, for, "like Nemesis of old, whom neither prayers nor threats could move, the Revolution advances, with sombre and inevitable tread, over the flowers with which its devotees strew its paths, through the blood of its champions, and over the bodies of its enemies," and as August Spies' prophetic cry still rings from the scaffold, "There will come a time when our silence will be more powerful than the voice you strangle to-day."
